Levy keeps class sizes in check, programs in place

Last fall's success keeps levy requests off this fall's ballot

Like most districts, Mounds View now relies on referendum levies to help pay for basic educational expenses. But after approving last fall's levy referendum request, voters in the District were not asked to approve any additional levy requests on the ballot this fall.

As promised, the District has used levy dollars to keep class sizes in check, programs in place and increased the fund balance to help offset reductions anticipated in fiscal year 2008-2009.

Spending money wisely

More dollars go to classroom instruction and support than to any other area. This year, the District is spending 77 cents of every general fund dollar on classroom instruction and support.
